How to Activate Hyperlinks In PDF Free When Converting from Word

This tutorial shows exactly what you need to do to activate Word doc hyperlinks when converting to PDF.

My traffic report displays that many people are STILL searching solution for this. So let's solve this right now.

1. Choosing Open Office

If you don't know what Open Office is, it's a free resource that allows you to have Microsoft Office like software in your computer. Don't worry, there s no advertisement or spyware associated with this program. Let's first download this software right on your desktop.

Visit OpenOffice.org Upon arriving, you should proceed to download the Open Office.

Download now!

2. Downloading and Installing Open Office

After saving the file to your computer, go ahead and install the Open Office. I trust you have at least this level of computer proficiency without me having to explaining step by step how to download and install this program on your computer all by yourself.

3. Open "Writer"

Within Open Office, there are Base, Calc, Draw, Impress, Math and Writer. All of these tools do work equivalent of Microsoft Office programs. For example, Writer works like the MS Word.

Once you have opened Writer, go to the upper left corner and pull down FILE then to OPEN. So do this FILE > OPEN.

Now, using OPEN, import Word doc (whatever doc file you want to convert to PDF) into the Writer.

Once the file appears within Writer, then go back to FILE then EXPORT AS PDF.

After saving your new doc as PDF, all the hyper links within the PDF should now be activated.

Pretty easy?

Another way to do this is by using eWriterPro software which comes with the purchase of my special report Mini Report Creation Guide. This report deals bit more in depth and takes you one step above so that you could build a website to sell your ebooks online.

If you've never published an ebook before, check out the site and see if you've covered everything you needed to know about writing a PDF then uploading and hosting through a website.
